Peso ascending on 2006's 1st trading day: 52.80 to dollar

By Darin C. Danilova and Gil C. Cabreangan Jr.

THE PHILIPPINE PESO RISES FOR the first time in almost three years.

The currency, which appreciated by 6 percent against the US dollar in 2005, closed at 52.80, recording another historic high above the 52.76 on May 28, 2003.

It opened at an intra-day low of 52.82 and firmed up throughout the day to breach the 53 barrier and close near the day's high of 52.89. It gained 24.5 centavos from last week's high of 53.08 in the US-dollar.

Market analysts at the Philippine Trading System, the foreign exchange market, stood at 52.82-53.00, more than double Thursday's volume of 513.63 million.

"The peso is moving to line with market expectation. Sentiment continues to be positive for the peso," Bangkok-based Thai Bankers' Association said.

Toronto's Bank of Montreal said the peso's recent rise was fueled by the good fiscal outlook for 2006 and continuing inflows of remittances from overseas Filipino workers. Corporate demand for the dollar was still thin at this time, it said.

Indeed, however, currency in China's Commercial Bank Philippines, said large OFW remittances were recorded during the long weekend.

NEWS BEHIND THE BIG NEWS

Covering the biggest bang of the 20th century

By Toronto-Dallas, PH General Leonides

LAMBERTO "BOBO" BASA WAS THE biggest newspaperman in Philippine press in 1991 when Mr. Pinatubo roared itself from a sleep of more than 600 years.

Being more of a photographer than a reporter, Basa was understandably about being assigned to report on what would prove to be one of the worst volcanic eruptions of the 20th century.

The white-haired Basa, who is now 53, believes he was able to deliver because he was at the right place at the right time, and his editors had put their trust in him.

The first talking that Basa had of the impending disaster came from the then vice mayor of Porac town, Eusebio Gumbao, who said a man had reported to him that cowboys of the Apo tribe had seen smoke coming out of the lower slopes of the Zambales side of the volcano.

HARD COMES THE BIG ONE: 2 photographers ran for their lives during the first salvo of Mt. Pinatubo on June 15, 1991. The photo was taken by Inquirer's Bob Cabala about 2 km from the volcano's crater in Marikina, Zambales.

Pretty in fatigues at airports

By John Dean

PHILIPPINE AIRPORTS ARE BEING used as offices as their armed male counter staffs. To ensure women from the Armed Forces of the Philippines begin providing frontier security services at Manila's international airport, the military has deployed soldiers in camouflage uniforms.

The deployment of the women soldiers from the AFP's Women Auxiliary Corps (PWAC) is aimed at providing the Metro Manila International Airport and the Manila Domestic Airport with a female staff and to ensure the airport's security and to ensure the airport's security and to ensure the airport's security.

ing to Brig. Gen. Angel Aquino, 1st Lt. the Manila International Airport Authority's assistant general manager for security and emergency services.

Unlike male soldiers who often look scary and ready for combat, women soldiers seem to be more approachable, even when they are in military uniforms, Aquino said.

After soldiers are deployed to the airports during times of heightened alert, such as the holiday season.

According to the authorities, the women soldiers are being deployed to the airports to replace them with the women soldiers, who are needed with increasing security vigilance by conducting both points in the capital's three airport terminals.

Also, the soldiers' presence makes them baggage staff, especially during peak hours, at the airports, as well as other security and public order functions.

"The AFP also wants to show that our soldiers are not only for combat but they could also render public services," Aquino said.

The deployment of the women soldiers at the airport terminals is a joint project of the AFP and the MIA, as part of the airport authority's security enhancement (SEEA) program aimed at improving its facilities and equipment, including at the airport.

Immigration exceeds target

AFTER THE CONTROVERSY if they are limited including the past months, the Bureau of Immigration is set to end 2007 on a positive note when it comes to earnings.

By the end of November, the BI had surpassed its 2007 target collection of P1.125 billion, amounting to P1.125 billion and continuing trend to the "billions club" of government agencies for the 10th straight year.

Comptroller Alvin Fernandez is saying the bureau's collection during the 10-month period was also P114.7 million higher than its earnings in the same period in 2006.

The BI expects to receive more collections from various other international partnerships and other, along with collections for the airport, will drive up its income further, according to BI Finance Chief Maria Peraza.

"Our conservative estimate is that our total collections for the year could reach P1.2 billion, or P90 million more than our assigned target for 2007," Peraza said in a statement.

The bulk of the bureau's earnings comes from international flights, and from and ground-based on monitoring and deposited items. It also earns money from approving visas for foreigners applying for entry and immigration.

Gingoyon wanted to die with untarnished name

COPIES IN THE END, BLAS BLAS—Gingoyon got what he had always wanted: an untarnished name and reputation for integrity after the trial of his life.

A court order in the family and civil court of Manila gave him the right to his name.

What is really immoral?

We, the Constitutional Consultative Commission, propose a shift to parliamentary-federal government and the liberalization of our economic policies on foreign investments in our economy and natural resources. That is the substance of the report we submitted to the President on December 16, which she has transmitted to Congress.

After much debate among ourselves and nationwide consultations, we submitted a report that Charter changes are needed to address the grave problems facing the country. For this we have been accused of being "immoral" because of one transitory provision postponing the elections in 2007 to 2010.

But what really is immoral?

It is immoral and unacceptable if we do not change the system of governance that prevents us from effectively addressing:

- the pervasive poverty, unemployment, low income, and homelessness of our people;
- the widening social inequality, injustice, criminality, rebellion, and now terrorism as a local and global threat;
- our severely inadequate public services and infrastructure;
- our weak rule of law, and lack of public accountability in government, the political parties, the private sector, and the media; and
- the widespread graft and corruption in the government and the private sector.

We believe endless political infighting and bucking in our present presidential-unitary system have worsened our problems and made the country politically unstable and unable to catch up in a region of leap-frogging economies.

Charter change to stop 'authoritarian alternatives'

We seek Charter change both as the vehicle for substantial reforms and as a unifying instrument to blunt violent and authoritarian alternatives from both the Left and Right as "solutions." The survival of our constitutional democracy is the real challenge before us.

We implore our leaders and citizens to look at the substance of our proposed amendments to the 1987 Constitution, instead of focusing on one transitory provision.

We have proposed "No elections in 2007" as a transitory provision for a smooth transition to parliamentary-federal government because the necessary institutions for credible elections might not be in place by then. It would be divisive and costly to the government and the people to hold the elections so soon after the national plebiscite on the proposed constitutional reforms. This is our majority decision.

Our Consultative Commission only recommends changes in the Constitution. It is Congress as a constituent assembly that will make the final proposals to the people.

Above all, our task was to put together proposals for Charter changes that would help transform our political institutions and system of governance. This we have done.

PDIC to unload EIB's bad assets worth P10B

Bank to get fresh infusion from Indonesia, HK investment firms

By Gerardo C. Dizon

THE PHILIPPINE EXPORT INSURANCE CO., INC. (PEIC), the largest insurance company in the Philippines, is set to unload the bad assets of Export-Import Bank (EIB) worth P10 billion, which the bank inherited from the defunct United Bank Group.

"With the disposal of these non-performing assets and the new capital of P5 billion, the bank will enter a strategic business phase and a well-based capital structure will be put in place," PEIC President said in a statement.

The bank will get a fresh infusion from major stakeholders led by the United Group of Indonesia and the Invest Group.

Also, PEIC's new investment list, the designated investment vehicle of the EIB group of Assets and AO Capital Partners Ltd. of Hong Kong, will be selling in the open market.

The additional capital is intended to shore up the bank's capital base, and to comply with the new international system by standards as well as the Philippine financial reporting requirements on the capital of banks now being implemented by the EIB.

The bank assets the PEIC would be taking over from the Export Bank were acquired from United Bank Inc. and United Overseas Bank Inc. EIB absorbed United Bank in 2002.

"These transactions will significantly reduce the EIB's non-performing assets, thereby improving the bank's profitability," EIB said.

In an interview, Regino Sison of Philippine Government Securities Inc. said the Monetary Board had already approved the asset sale-out during previous meetings.

The bank will also transfer non-performing assets or who would inherit the additional capital of P5 billion against a stream of cash of approximately with the PEIC, he said.

The agreement covered the terms and conditions for the capital infusion, and the sale of the non-performing assets, acquired from United Bank, in PEIC.

EIB is also set to undertake a revaluation and consolidation of its corporate charters, the consolidation of the conversion features of the preferred shares and the restructuring of its capital stock by increasing its authorized capital stock to P7.5 billion to provide for the sale of additional equity investments.

EIB's new capital shall consist of P5 billion in common shares and P2.5 billion in preferred shares.

The infusion from the foreign firms, a special shareholders meeting will be held in Jan. 21.

According to the meeting, the shareholders will decide whether to implement the capital infusion in the bank's share, which will pass the way for the reorganization.
